THE NARROW GAUGE RAILROAD .- Work is still in progress on the parrow gauge railroad, and arrangements for the future seem to be taking a more definite shape. In addition to the sub-cription paper which has already been noticed in The Star, and which provides for payment in instalments on the completion of different portious of the road, a paper is now on circulation in which signers obligate them silves to pay the amount by them subscribed when the road is completed and cars tuoning on regular time between here and Falls Church. These papers have each about $5,000 already subscrib.d, and the names comprise many of our most careful business men .-Washington Star.

THE CAPITATION TAX -An impression is said to prevail among many cit zens that the payment last year of the tax bills for 1876 entitles them to vote at the coming municipal election. This is a mistake, as the bils for 1877, the year preceding this, are the ones required to be paid. Voters should be careful to pete the dates at the head of their tax tills.

The only bodies identified are these of Jacob Rhodes, John Royer and Charles Wilber. Tho following is the valuation of the mills destroyed : The Washburn, a six story building, $300,000; the Humboldt, $60.000; the Diamond, $50,000; Galaxy, $85,000; Zenith, $60,000; Pettit & Robinson, $125,000.

During the whole of yesterday the scene of the explosion and fire has been the centre of intense excitement. The rules presented only shapeless heaps of stone where the six miles destroyed had stood, which still smouldered, and upon which streams of water were kept playing from several fire engines all day. Upon the platform on the south side of the canal the ruin is complete, except as to the Washburn mill, which stands at a slight distance from the others. On the other side the walls of the Pettett & Robinson mill are a standing ruin, while the Palisade, at a little distance, escaped by a singular freak of the flames. The mills destroyed, with the number of runs of stone, were as follows: Washburn, A, 41 runs of stones; Pettett, Robinson & Co., 15 runs of Pettet & Robinson's lumber yard, with one S o'clock to night. See advertisement elsomillion feet of lumber; planing mill owned by W. D. Washbburn, loss $75,000; mill com papies' clevator, loss $61,000 on Inilding and thirty thousand bushels of wheat; 27 cirs on the railroad track, and several small machine shops and buildings. This list embraces destruction by fire alone. The loss to surrounding buildings by the shock of the explosion is material. The round house of the Chicago, Milwaukee and Sr. Paul Railroad was blown down by the force of the concussion. There was an insurance of fifteen hundred dollars on the building. The total loss is now estimated at $1,000,000, which may be increased later. The search for the dead has proceeded all day as fast as the fire could be ex tinguished and the ruins cooled. Up to 11 o'cleek this morning the black and unrecogniz able remains of seven of the unfortunate vioouits, broad, rolls; muffices, cakes, and pastry time of the Washburu Mill had been recovered. southern and of the building was a crowd of forgotten by any speciator. The smaller fragments of bodies were ranged in close preximity the aftergoon. The estimate of the oumber of the dead, based upon the bodies recovered, those known to be in the mil, and irquiries for missing, is placed at sixteen, of which the fol lowing is a list: In the Washburn Mill, Chas. Fred. Miller, grinders; Wm. Loslie and Cyrus Euing, oilers; Ole Shie, Walter Savage, Patrick Judd and Ed. Merrill, machinemen; Harry Hicks and E. W. Butbank, watchman, and Charles Kimble. In the Diamond Mill, John Boyer. In the Zmith Mill, John E. Rosienous. In the Humbolt Mill, Peter Holbey. The smaller casualties bargs, bruises, etc., are numerous and further developments may increase or decrease the number dead. It is not likely that all the bodies will be recovered from the ruine. Nearly all those recovered are more or less outilated. Fragments
